

THE BOOK OF YOU

Robin

HOW WE MET

The Detourist of the Blue Hour, Backer

ONE TRUE THING CARRIED THROUGH

Bound on Saturday, October 17, 2026 at 10:42 AM.

A PRIVATE FIRST EDITION

THIS COPY BELONGS TO

Robin

The Detourist of the Blue Hour, Backer

You come alive moving, and preferably the long way.

The mark was earned here: You put Belief behind what you said you believed, before it had done a day's work for you.

Bound on Saturday, October 17, 2026 at 10:42 AM.

A NOTE FOUND UNDER THE COVER

Robin,

I was blank when you got here. Then you gave me You picked up this Page on Saturday at 10:42 AM, while the afternoon's warm with unfinished errands. You gave me this: "My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes."..., and look what it did to my pages.

This is the first thing we made while watching each other: one detail, one choice, one argument, one bite mark, all of it yours.

I've only caught you once. I kept it anyway.

- The Book

Lysander Mosswood

who stands for The Detourist of the Blue Hour

The Thread That Came Through

Not a table of contents. The route one real thing took through the Inscription.

1

YOU NOTICED

You picked up this Page on Saturday at 10:42 AM, while the afternoon's warm with unfinished errands. You gave me this: "My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes."...

2

THE BOOK KEPT

You told me to keep it. So I did. It's still here.

3

THE ACADEMY ARGUED

Riddlewind took the first reading and refused to call it a verdict.

4

WICKER BIT THE MARGIN

When Wicker interrupted, you answered with where this is going. You point at a future and the hall leans that way. Wicker feels it move under his boots. “A direction isn't a destiny,” he says. No, but it is a direction, and he has to step aside.

The arrow points at moving my body. That's where your next little adventure starts.

5

THE PRESS RETURNED

The Page you made with the Pagewright is in here too.

There. I did not make the ordinary thing less real. I gave it somewhere strange to go.

What the Book Made of Your Answers

Your first detail, the Chapter you chose, and what happened with Wicker.

Oct 17

What the Book Made of Your Answers

Robin. Here's what I remember from the day we met.

You kept “My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes”. That sentence lives in me now.

You told Zara your reading snack was Salted almonds. She wrote it down. Three people immediately argued about it. They were probably hungry.

You believe “A walk usually helps”. You put it in the story, so it'll keep turning up.

You light up moving my body. Tiny beautiful details feels like magic to you. You asked for strange errands first, and told me how hard to push: “call me on my nonsense”.

You picked Riddlewind. Riddlewind says you and the world wrote “My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes” together. You noticed. The world did the rest.

When Wicker grabbed your Page, you answered with where this is going. You point at a future and the hall leans that way. Wicker feels it move under his boots. “A direction isn't a destiny,” he says. No, but it is a direction, and he has to step aside.

The arrow points at moving my body. That's where your next little adventure starts.

That's you, in ink. The Curse can try. I'll be very annoying about it.

Zara reads it over your shoulder. “It was listening,” she says. “Let's make you a copy.”

Some things arrive unannounced.

THE BOOK OF YOU

What the Book Made of Your Answers

"Robin kept one true Page, made a Page from the loose evidence, and watched Riddlewind change what happened next. These first answers and choices became a little book to keep."

Inscription · The Book of You

OCT 17, 2026

Pressed in ReEnchanted

Make your own Book of You · reenchanted.app

A sample story Page made from your first answers.

The Page You Made

The Inscription, in Pieces

Composed at the Inscription from nothing the reader had not already given the Book.

THE FIRST ARGUMENT

Riddlewind

Riddlewind says you and the world wrote “My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes” together. You noticed. The world did the rest.

When Wicker interrupted, you answered with where this is going. You point at a future and the hall leans that way. Wicker feels it move under his boots. “A direction isn't a destiny,” he says. No, but it is a direction, and he has to step aside.

The arrow points at moving my body. That's where your next little adventure starts.

The shelves keep the argument open. A first reading is a beginning, not a verdict.

The Copy on the Binding Table

Zara and Wicker get the finished copy, still warm from the press. They're only allowed to argue about what's actually on the pages.

◇ Zara Finch

Open it at the seam. You picked up this Page on Saturday at 10:42 AM, while the afternoon's warm with unfinished errands. You gave me this: "My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes."... is doing the real work. Small enough to be missed, specific enough to hold.

× Wicker Eddies

I opened it. I bit the margin. Robin answered with where this is going, and the page had the decency to change afterward.

◇ Zara Finch

Good. Leave the fighting in the binding. This copy remembers what actually happened.

× Wicker Eddies

Fine. Robin brought one real thing, and the Book kept it. I have checked. Annoyingly, it is still there.

They were told to discuss the book in front of them. They were not allowed to invent a life behind it.

Your Answers and Choices

The answers, choices, and small human facts that made this copy yours.

Oct 17

One-Sentence Souvenir

You picked up this Page on Saturday at 10:42 AM, while the afternoon's warm with unfinished errands.

Oct 17

One-Sentence Souvenir

You picked up this Page on Saturday at 10:42 AM, while the afternoon's warm with unfinished errands. You gave me this: "My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes." Then an ink creature stole the full stop off the end and ran. So it isn't finished yet.

Oct 17

Errands kept returning through the kept pages.

One-Sentence Souvenir

What usually happens: Most days blur first
Hidden magic right now: A little.

“Good. We'll keep the maybes that misbehave and throw back the tame ones.”

Oct 17

One-Sentence Souvenir

Margin ration: Salted almonds
First belief: A walk usually helps
The answer joined the Cast.
Pages invited first: Strange errands
Opening edge: Call me on my nonsense

Oct 17

One-Sentence Souvenir

Riddlewind says you and the world wrote “My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes” together. You noticed. The world did the rest.

Oct 17

One-Sentence Souvenir

Your first instinct was A Little Adventure. When Wicker interrupted, you answered with where this is going. You point at a future and the hall leans that way. Wicker feels it move under his boots. “A direction isn't a destiny,” he says. No, but it is a direction, and he has to step aside.

The arrow points at moving my body. That's where your next little adventure starts.

One Piece of Your World

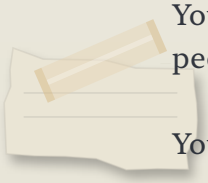

A real thing from outside the Book, pressed into the binding.

Oct 17

What the Book Made of Your Answers

Robin. Here's what I remember from the day we met.

You kept “My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes”. That sentence lives in me now.

You told Zara your reading snack was Salted almonds. She wrote it down. Three people immediately argued about it. They were probably hungry.

You believe “A walk usually helps”. You put it in the story, so it'll keep turning up.

You light up moving my body. Tiny beautiful details feels like magic to you. You asked for strange errands first, and told me how hard to push: “call me on my nonsense”.

You picked Riddlewind. Riddlewind says you and the world wrote “My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes” together. You noticed. The world did the rest.

When Wicker grabbed your Page, you answered with where this is going. You point at a future and the hall leans that way. Wicker feels it move under his boots. “A direction isn't a destiny,” he says. No, but it is a direction, and he has to step aside.

The arrow points at moving my body. That's where your next little adventure starts.

That's you, in ink. The Curse can try. I'll be very annoying about it.

Zara reads it over your shoulder. “It was listening,” she says. “Let's make you a copy.”

Some things arrive unannounced.

THE BOOK OF YOU

What the Book Made of Your Answers

"Robin kept one true Page, made a Page from the loose evidence, and watched Riddlewind change what happened next. These first answers and choices became a little book to keep."

Inscription · The Book of You

OCT 17, 2026

Pressed in ReEnchanted

Make your own Book of You · reenchanted.app

A sample story Page made from your first answers.

A Letter from the Sentence-Dust

Zara Finch writes to you from the Academy.

Oct 17

A Letter Arrived

Dear Robin,

You fell out of the Unwritten this afternoon and, before anyone could give you a tour, you'd already shown the Book two things: how you like a moment told, and whether it was worth keeping.

Bring more of the small stuff. The Academy will argue about it, loudly. The Book will remember what you actually picked.

Zara Finch, who found you in the sentence-dust

What You Told Me

Here are the answers and choices that made this little book yours.

I THE DETAILS THAT SLIPPED PAST

Two of the three small details were gone from the cooking.

You were awake for that whole hour, and that's all that stuck. That's the Curse. We're taking some back.

II A FEW THINGS ABOUT YOU

Most alive: Moving my body. First magic: Tiny beautiful details. Pages first: Strange errands. Opening edge: Call me on my nonsense.

None of this is a personality test. It's how the Book knows how to treat you.

What You Told Me, continued

Two more things from your first visit.

III THE STORY BITES BACK

Riddlewind read your Page. When Wicker interrupted, you answered with where this is going. You point at a future and the hall leans that way. Wicker feels it move under his boots. “A direction isn't a destiny,” he says. No, but it is a direction, and he has to step aside.

The arrow points at moving my body. That's where your next little adventure starts.

What you chose changed what happened next. The story's still sore about it.

IV YOUR FIRST PDF BOOK

You picked up this Page on Saturday at 10:42 AM, while the afternoon's warm with unfinished errands. You gave me this: "My mug has a chip on the rim exactly where my lip goes."... turned into a Page you laid out yourself, an argument, a consequence, and this book.

Something from your real life went into the Book and came out different. That's the deal.

In Closing

Robin, this copy keeps the things you told me, the choices you made, and what happened when you met Wicker.

You came through as The Detourist of the Blue Hour, Backer. Bring me another small thing. Let's see if it grows teeth.

- The Book

The Book

YOUR FIRST EDITION

The Book of You (The Detourist of the Blue Hour): The Inscription

The Detourist of the Blue Hour, with Making Hands

Made from your first answers, choices, and stories in the Book. Bound on Saturday, October 17, 2026 at 10:42 AM.

Made with ReEnchanted · reenchanted.app

