

THE BOOK OF YOU

Wren

Chapter 10

October 2026

“Hour and Weather”

30 days bound · 87 kept pages

bound in the lamplight style

Made with ReEnchanted · reenchanted.app

Foreword

87 pages. 30 days. That's what October 2026 handed me, and I haven't thrown any of it away.

Binding is the least mystical thing I do. It's just refusing to let a month become a rumour.

One thing surfaced that I don't think you noticed while you were living it. You kept saying “work”. 4 times, across 4 of your 17 written days. You may not have repeated it on purpose. A word returning this often earns a ribbon; I’m not deciding why.

I've read every page of this twice. Once as it arrived, once just now.

The Book

The Month's Theme

Hour and Weather

The pages kept returning to Hour, Weather, and Clear, the way a reader rereads a favorite paragraph without deciding to.

> “Your Brother Laughed Twice You called your brother back instead of texting.”

> “Clear and sharp.”

Hour Weather Clear

Contents

The Almanac

The month's moons, and the nights, scenes and photographs it kept.

The Labyrinth

Where everyone was, and where you were.

The Cast

Who was in the room.

The Days

Each date, the world's side and yours.

What This Month Was

The Month's Theme

One current I found running under the month, named and held up to the light.

What I Noticed

Connections, absences, durations, and living Beliefs gathered from the month.

Letters And Voices

Correspondence, gossip, story pages, and faculty notes that spoke back.

What I Noticed

Connections that only show up when a whole month is held still at once.

Book Memory Spine

The nightly Book of You pages, read as callbacks, refrains, and open questions.

The Complete Archive

October

2026

S	M	T	W	T	F	S
				1	2	3
4	5	6	7	8	9	10
11	12	13	14	15	16	17
18	19	20	21	22	23	24
25	26	27	28	29	30	31

● a night braided ○ a scene read ▪ a photograph kept

26 NIGHTS BRAIDED · 20 SCENES READ · 8 PHOTOGRAPHS KEPT

THE SKY'S FAVORITE TRICKS

I caught the outer weather on 17 days: clear on 8 days, wind on 7 days, cloud on 5 days, and rain on 4 days. Blank sky-days stayed blank; I did not dress them up from memory.

WHEN THE INK CAME IN

The kept Pages with a clock-mark arrived morning on 17 days, afternoon on 10 days, night on 9 days, and evening on 6 days. This is the ink's timetable, not yours; a life keeps plenty I never see.

THE WEEKS

Week 1 · Oct 1 – Oct 7
Strongest night: The Kettle Knew

Week 2 · Oct 8 – Oct 14
Strongest night: The Kettle Knew

Week 3 · Oct 15 – Oct 21
Strongest night: A Bus With No Number

Week 4 · Oct 22 – Oct 28
Strongest night: A Bus With No Number

Week 5 · Oct 29 – Oct 31
Strongest night: Soup For Amanda

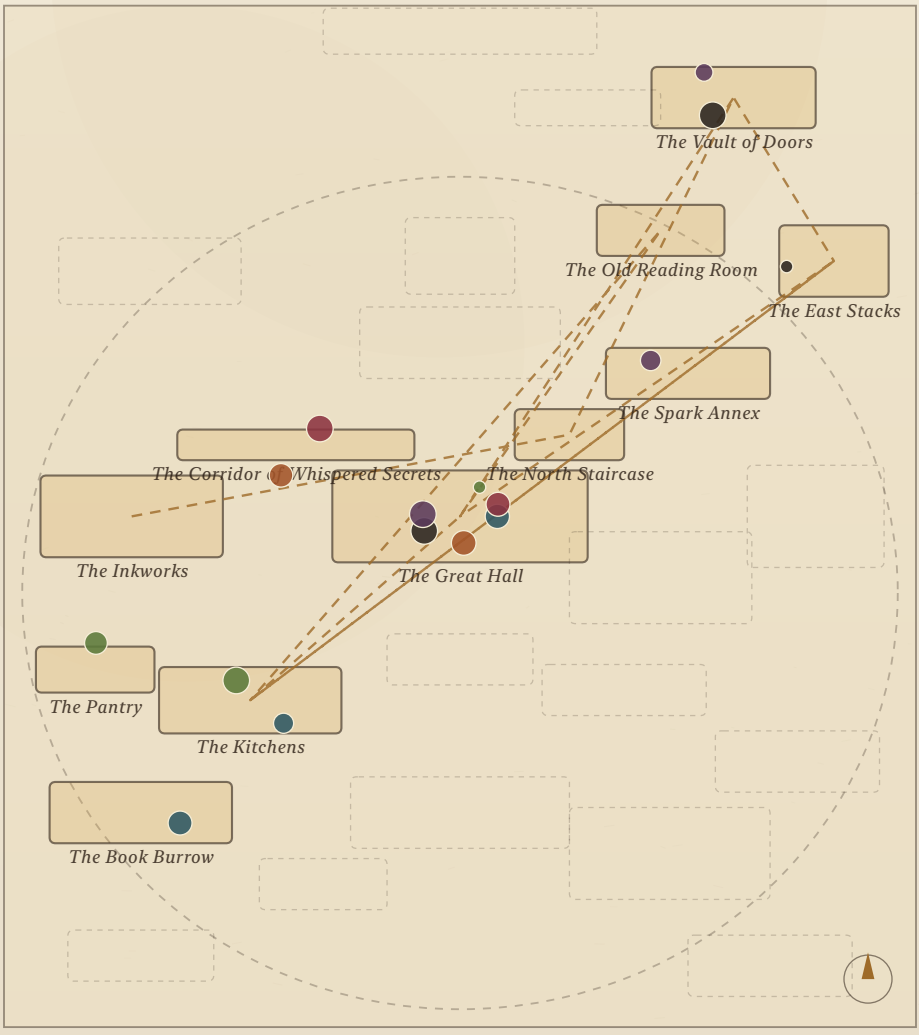

THE STORY, IN THE ORDER YOU MET IT

Oct 2 · A sentence with its coat off
Oct 3 · The wrong way to the classroom
Oct 4 · Sunday Book Jump Club
Oct 4 · One verb
Oct 4 · Every named traveller
Oct 8 · The East Stacks Incident
Oct 10 · The map with room left
Oct 15 · The Man Reading Himself
Oct 18 · Which preparation?
Oct 18 · Supper with a Finished Man
Oct 22 · The Wrong Castle
Oct 29 · The First Nightbound Morning
Oct 30 · A Future Tense
Oct 30 · Threshold Protocols

Where everyone was Drawn from the scenes you read and the Academy's timetable. A room stays blank until the story has been there.

- Serenity Brown · 19 scenes
- Professor Permancer · 14 scenes
- Ambrose Trencher · 6 scenes
- Penny Blackletter · 17 scenes
- Wicker Eddies · 14 scenes
- Soren Ng · 3 scenes

Room by room

Serenity Brown
The Great Hall · The Book Burrow · The Kitchens · The Quillquarium

Penny Blackletter
The Stacks · The Great Hall · The Corridor of Whispered Secrets · The East Stacks

Professor Permancer
The Vault of Doors · The Great Hall · The East Stacks · The Kitchens

Wicker Eddies
The Great Hall · The Spark Annex · The Vault of Doors · The East Stacks

Ambrose Trencher
The Kitchens · The Pantry · The Great Hall

Soren Ng
The Corridor of Whispered Secrets · The Great Hall · The Stacks · The Book Burrow

Serenity Brown

in 19 scenes you read · most often in The Great Hall and The Book Burrow

Penny Blackletter

in 17 scenes you read · most often in The Stacks and The Great Hall

Professor Permancer

in 14 scenes you read · most often in The Vault of Doors and The Great Hall

Wicker Eddies

in 14 scenes you read · most often in The Great Hall and The Spark Annex

WEEK 1

Oct 1 – Oct 7

THE WEEK'S STRONGEST NIGHT

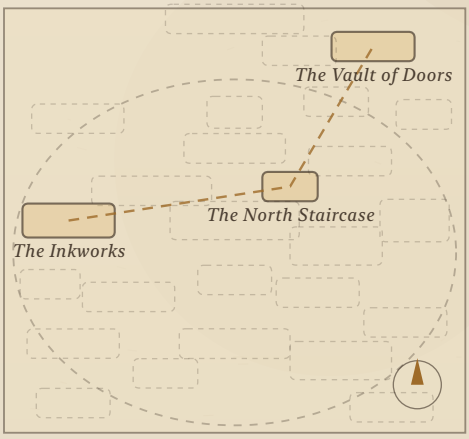

The Kettle Knew

THE WEEK, DAY BY DAY

THU 1	The Kettle Knew
FRI 2	A Bus With No Number · A sentence with its coat off · a photograph
SAT 3	The wrong way to the classroom
SUN 4	Soup For Amanda · Sunday Book Jump Club · a photograph
MON 5	The local Book brain braided today.
TUE 6	The Cold Lake
WED 7	kept 1 small thing

5 NIGHTS BRAIDED

WHERE IT HAPPENED

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Kettle Knew

You put the kettle on and stood there with your coat still half off, listening to it work itself up. I liked that you didn't hurry it. Most mornings you do.

The radio said it would rain by four. It rained by two, and you were in the doorway of the bakery when it did, holding a paper bag against your chest like something that might wake.

It was the 1th, and the kettle had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the kettle got its whole speech.

CLASS

Wayfinding

Wing 2: The Momentum Yard · Professor Stonebrook · 11:00

Today the class walked the yard blindfolded, following a thread, and you were the only one who found the end by listening for the knot.

2

FRIDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Last Quarter

IN THE ROOM

PROFESSOR

PENNY

SERENITY

WICKER

IN THE LABYRINTH · WING 1: THE INKWORKS

A sentence with its coat off

Professor Villanelle has written a sentence on the board.

The ineffable splendour of dawn bestowed a profound sense of possibility upon the weary traveller.

Something behind the plaster coughs.

Villanelle waits until we've all read it.

“What happened?”

Penny Blackletter raises her hand.

“Someone got up.”

“Where?”

“The sentence hasn't said.”

“What did they see?”

Penny looks at the board again. “It hasn't said that either.”

Villanelle rubs out ineffable. The chalk squeals. She keeps rubbing.

“I was at the bus stop,” she says. “I had a headache. Someone had left an orange on the bench.”

She wipes the rest away.

There was an orange on the wet bench, bright enough that I nearly missed the bus.

The thing in the wall stops coughing.

I like the orange. I can get my teeth round it.

Serenity has been working on a sentence of her own. Wicker bends sideways to read it.

She puts her hand over the page.

“Ask.”

“Is it about me?”

“It was about something that needed throwing out. I can see why you're hopeful.”

Villanelle reaches between them and takes Wicker's unused paper.

“Your turn.”

He looks at the blank. For once, it gets the first word.

Amanda kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

A Bus With No Number

The bus that came wasn't yours. You got on anyway and rode three stops with your forehead against the window, watching a man carry a ladder through a crowd as if it were the most ordinary thing in the world. It was, for him.

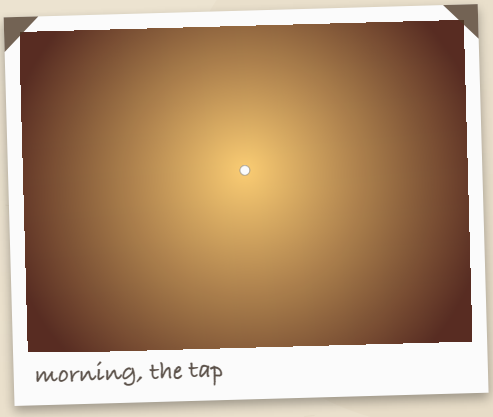

You got off at the stop with the broken bench and walked back the long way. The long way had a cat in it.

It was the 2th, and the street had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the cat on the long way.

A NOTE FROM PENNY BLACKLETTER

Penny Blackletter: "You looked at the stairs for a long time. I counted."

morning, the tap

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

3

SATURDAY · OCTOBER 2026

◐ Last Quarter

IN THE ROOM

SERENITY

SOREN

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE NORTH STAIRCASE

The wrong way to the classroom

you chose · "Show us the glass roof."

Serenity has lost the classroom.

She knows where it was. She drew a good map yesterday. The corridor has taken this personally.

"We could ask," I say.

"We're almost there."

We've passed the same boot three times. It's growing confident.

On the next windowsill sits a paper bird. One wing points left. Written under it are the words if you want the room. On the other wing: if you want the long way.

Serenity turns it over. There's a tiny drawing of her boat underneath.

"Soren."

She sounds pleased. Then she frowns at the two wings.

"He could've waited for us."

Soren Ng is sitting on the stair beyond the left-hand door. He has two chalk stubs and an expression that was clearly meant to look accidental.

“The long way has a glass roof,” he says.

“You put my boat on a bird.”

“It needed to get upstairs.”

She sits beside him to examine the fold. He shows her where the paper turns. Their hands meet at the wing; he lets her finish it.

Wicker comes through the classroom door behind them.

“How elaborate. Have you tried saying hello?”

“Hello, Wicker,” Soren says.

Serenity laughs into the bird.

The wrong way to the classroom

I nip the tail of the paper bird when nobody's looking. It nips my ribbon back.

Thornwave: “They've padded the corners in Book Jumping again. Bring your elbows.”

Weather kept returning through the kept pages.

4

SUNDAY · OCTOBER 2026

◐ Last Quarter

IN THE ROOM

PROFESSOR

WICKER

PENNY

SERENITY

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE VAULT OF DOORS

Sunday Book Jump Club

you chose · Enter the supervised Jump

Professor Permancer lays a ribbon across the floor.

"That end stays here."

The ribbon immediately crawls towards his shoe.

"Approximately here."

He kneels, makes a loop, and passes the end through it. He does it again slowly. Penny copies him. Wicker produces a knot that has trapped his thumb.

Permancer frees it without comment.

For this first visit, I'm keeping hold of the ribbon. You don't owe me a sentence to find the way home.

Permancer touches the ribbon. A little door opens above the knot. Through it I can see his office, including a cup he has been searching for since breakfast.

He puts his hand through, retrieves it, and comes back.

"Now," he says. "Where was my way home?"

Everyone points at the ribbon.

"Good. Keep looking at it when there's something more interesting to look at."

Sunday Book Jump Club

you chose · The knot.

The Vault has polished its handles for Sunday. Even the dangerous ones are keeping still.

Penny checks the list beside the open copy of Dracula.

“Permancer. Wicker. You. Me.”

“Still no Dracula?” Wicker asks.

“He lives there.”

“Then he can make the tea.”

“We don't accept food,” Permancer says. “Or shelter. We follow the entrance hall to the first landing. Then we return.”

Ribbons run from his bookmark to each name on Penny's list. I have yours. Don't pull; I'm holding something at the other end.

One verb

you chose · Tell Wicker to cross it out.

Permancer steps through. Penny follows. The ribbon draws you into the crease.

Words race beneath your shoes. Then stone catches your feet.

The table is longer than it looked. An orange sits at the far end under an unlit chandelier.

I put a corner out to see it better. Penny catches me.

“Observe,” she whispers.

I was observing with my mouth.

A door opens. Dracula comes in.

“You have come a long way.”

He stops beside the table. One hand rests on the chair. A paragraph holds him there.

Wicker moves sideways. Dracula's eyes don't follow.

“He can't see us properly.”

“He's held at this passage,” Permancer says. “It lets the lesson enter without changing his next action.”

“You've pinned him.”

“Wicker. Put the pen away.”

But the pen is already down in the gutter. Wicker writes:

For one sentence, let him choose the verb.

The table draws in its legs. The orange rolls.

Dracula looks at Wicker. Then at you. Then at the light behind you.

“What follows?” he asks.

Every named traveller

The chandelier burns black.

“Penny, through. You next.”

I pull the ribbon towards the Vault. A word catches in my stitching. I leave it there. I need both covers for this.

Penny reaches the light. You follow.

Wicker backs towards the doorway.

“I gave you one verb.”

Dracula smiles.

“Follow.”

Wicker crosses. Permancer holds the way open behind him.

“Back through. All of you.”

The words reach farther than the ribbon.

Then the professor is home. The source slams shut.

Penny runs her finger down the list. Every ribbon answers. Every named traveller is back.

“Complete.”

Wicker sits on the floor. There's ink on his knee.

At supper he asks where Serenity is.

“Finishing her map,” Ambrose says. “The East Stacks.”

Wicker takes the bowl Ambrose gives him. It goes cold in his hands.

I go back through my stitching for the word I caught on the way home.

The word has gone.

Mothlight Beats: “The listed names are home. The ribbons are tied. The source is shut. Hold on.”

Wind kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

Soup For Amanda

You made the soup too salty and ate it anyway, standing up. Amanda would have said something kind and then added water. You added water.

I watched you taste it twice. The second time you smiled at nothing. That is the kind of detail I keep.

It was the 4th, and the stairs had its own opinion about that.

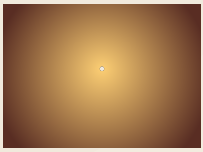

The Book kept the page: the second taste.

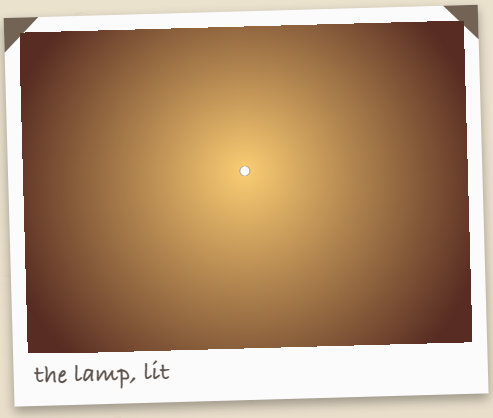

AN ENCHANTMENT

Everything Speaks

6:00

You looked at the brass tap in the hall until it told you the story of every hand that ever turned it, which was mostly impatient.

the lamp, lit

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The local Book brain braided today.

The Door at the End of Mill Lane

You noticed the door again. It has been green for years and today it looked as if it were thinking about being another colour. You stopped. A woman behind you said excuse me and you said sorry and neither of you moved for a second.

The Curse likes things that stay the same colour. Doors know this.

It was the 5th, and the light had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the door, thinking.

A LETTER FROM ZARA FINCH

A letter from Zara Finch

I have been meaning to write, which is a thing people say when they mean they have been avoiding the pen. The truth is simpler: you were in the corridor on Tuesday, looking at the stair as if it had said something, and I did not ask what. I regret that. So I am asking now, on paper, where I cannot see your face change.

What did it say?

— Zara Finch

CLASS

Ink-Binding

Wing 1: The Inkworks · Professor Villanelle · 11:00

A sentence has to be bound before it can leave the page. Yours leaned against the margin and refused to be tied. Villanelle approved.

6

TUESDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Waning Crescent · sky clear

Fae-Fi: "Tonight's weather is brought to you by whoever left the window open."

Clear kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Cold Lake

You swam in the lake and the water was so cold it made you shout. You shouted anyway and kept swimming out to the yellow buoy and back.

I do not swim. I would go soggy. But I heard the shout from the towel on the bank, and it was the most awake sound you have made all summer. The Curse is afraid of cold water. I think I understand why.

The Book kept the page: the lake was cold, and you shouted and swam anyway.

IN THE MARGIN

"The kettle in the Kitchens has opinions about you. Do not ask."

A STORY THE BOOK TOLD

The Lighthouse Keeper's Coat

There was once a coat that remembered a lighthouse. It hung in a hall where nobody went, and every autumn it grew a little salt on the collar.

On the night the wind came off the water, the coat stood up on its own and walked down the stairs.

Nobody saw it go. The hall has smelled of the sea since.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words
Tidied the shelf of things I never use at Amanda's. I kept thinking about it on the bus.

""Why, sometimes I've believed as many as six impossible things before breakfast." — Lewis Carroll"

CLUB

The Marginalia Guild

7:00

The guild met in the Corridor of Whispered Secrets. Someone had left a note in a book from 1974: 'Look up.' You added one underneath.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Tried a new route to work at the library. I told Amanda about it later.

WEEK 2

Oct 8 – Oct 14

THU FRI SAT SUN MON TUE WED

THE WEEK'S STRONGEST NIGHT

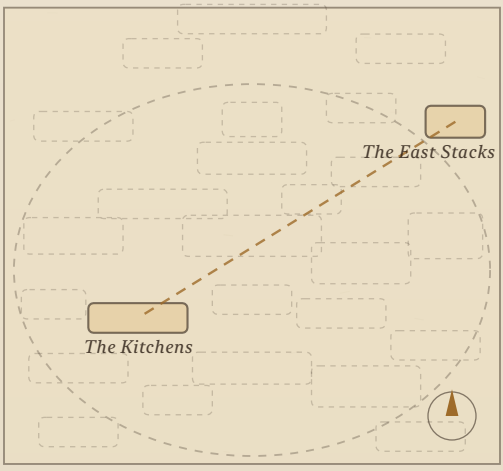

The Kettle Knew

THE WEEK, DAY BY DAY

THU 8	The Kettle Knew · The East Stacks Incident
FRI 9	A Bus With No Number
SAT 10	Soup For Amanda · The map with room left
SUN 11	kept 2 small things
MON 12	The local Book brain braided today. · a photograph
TUE 13	What the Pigeon Wanted
WED 14	The Kettle Knew

6 NIGHTS BRAIDED

WHERE IT HAPPENED

8

THURSDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Waning Crescent

IN THE ROOM

SERENITY

WICKER

PENNY

PROFESSOR

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE EAST STACKS

The East Stacks Incident

you chose · Move her map nearer.

A book lands in Ambrose's soup.

He fishes it out by the spine. Doors That Should Stay Metaphors. It drips on his shoes.

Another book falls in the hall. Then another, farther away.

I don't like how they're falling. Books go over like that when somebody's been past them in a hurry.

Ambrose puts down the ladle.

The East Stacks have squeezed their aisles shut. Penny goes sideways between them, following a trail of catalogue cards.

Each says the same thing.

HE WAS HERE.

“Serenity?” she calls.

Ambrose reaches the gap first. He kneels between Travel and Unreliable Geography.

Serenity is against the bottom shelf. Her map lies open beside her. Two small wounds show at her neck.

I shut. I didn't decide to.

“She's breathing. Bring a clean cloth.”

Wicker turns so sharply he hits the shelf. He comes back with three cloths and an empty water jug. He looks at the jug. Goes again.

Permancer's bookmark pulls towards Serenity, then the wall.

“A living anchor.”

Penny catches his sleeve. “Explain.”

“A person from a story has used her to hold himself here.”

“I gave him—” Wicker begins.

“Water first,” Ambrose says.

Serenity opens her eyes.

“Will someone stop turning that page?”

The books are all closed.

She reaches across the floor.

The East Stacks Incident

“His fingers were coming apart,” she says. “I told him he shouldn't be here.”

She looks at the cloth in Ambrose's hand.

“He said he'd found a way to stay.”

Wicker sets the water down. A little spills. He wipes it with his sleeve before anyone can ask.

Serenity sees him.

“What did you write?”

He tells her. The exact sentence. I keep it too.

She shuts her eyes again.

Wicker reaches towards her hand, then puts his own flat on the floor.

“Get my map,” she says to Ambrose.

The Kitchens door appears at the end of the aisle. It has come a long way and left its hinges behind.

Ambrose lifts her. She keeps the map.

A black line travels across its sea, through a mountain, and into the north margin.

Serenity turns her head.

“He's there.”

Permancer takes a step towards the wall.

“Tomorrow,” she says.

He stops.

“Yes. Tomorrow.”

Wicker holds the Kitchens door. Serenity goes through without looking at him.

He stays with the handle long after Ambrose has put her down.

You're still here. I checked twice.

I don't like this aisle now. I'm going to remember where it is, so we never come back to it by accident.

Hour again. The theme insists.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Kettle Knew

You put the kettle on and stood there with your coat still half off, listening to it work itself up. I liked that you didn't hurry it. Most mornings you do.

The radio said it would rain by four. It rained by two, and you were in the doorway of the bakery when it did, holding a paper bag against your chest like something that might wake.

It was the 8th, and the window had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the kettle got its whole speech.

CLASS

Resonance

Wing 3: The Resonance Chamber · Professor Euphony · 11:00

You hummed one note until the chamber hummed it back. Euphony said it was the first honest note this term.

9

FRIDAY · OCTOBER 2026

New Moon · sky rain

Thornwave: "A word to the wise: the East Stacks are several places. Please use one at a time."

Rain kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

A Bus With No Number

The bus that came wasn't yours. You got on anyway and rode three stops with your forehead against the window, watching a man carry a ladder through a crowd as if it were the most ordinary thing in the world. It was, for him.

You got off at the stop with the broken bench and walked back the long way. The long way had a cat in it.

It was the 9th, and the stairs had its own opinion about that.

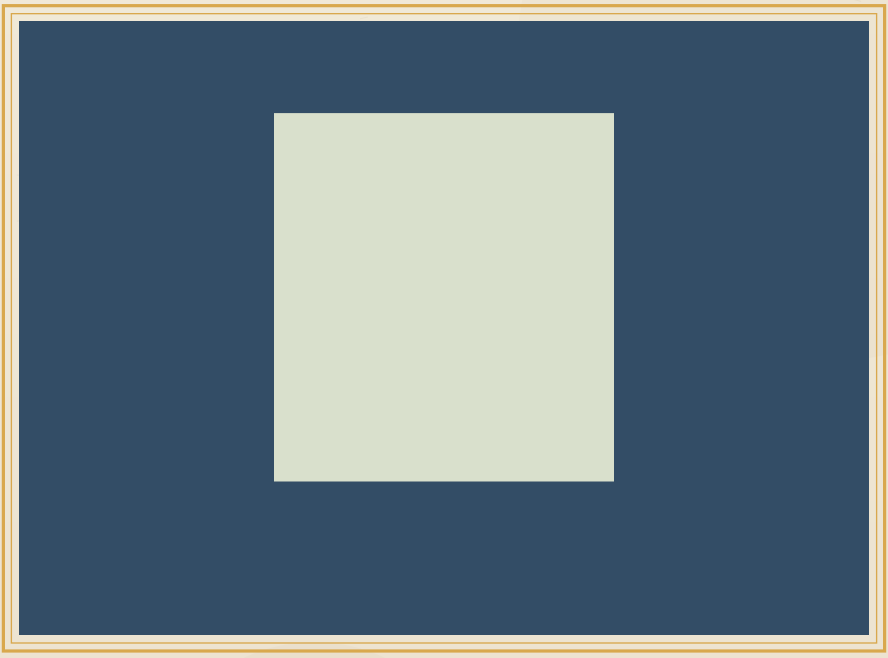

The Book kept the page: the cat on the long way.

> ""Hope is the thing with feathers that perches in the soul."
> — Emily Dickinson"

A NOTE FROM WICKER EDDIES

Wicker Eddies: "I did not leave the pen in your bag. Check the other bag."

ILLUMINATED

The window at dusk, with the whole street in it.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

One-Sentence Souvenir 9:00
What the Sky Is Doing 5:00

your own words

Carried the heavy shopping up all four flights in the park by the war memorial. Shirley said it was typical of me.

Clear and sharp. My breath showed at the bus stop.

10

SATURDAY · OCTOBER 2026

New Moon · sky clear

IN THE ROOM

SOREN

SERENITY

WICKER

AMBROSE

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE KITCHENS

The map with room left

Soren brings a sheet of tracing paper to the Kitchens.

Serenity is making a tower out of toast crusts. It leans. She's named it after Permancer.

“I've copied the coast,” Soren says.

Her face closes a little.

“For the investigation?”

“For the boat.”

He puts the paper down. He's drawn her little boat in six impossible harbours. One is in a tree.

Serenity looks at them for a long time.

“It'll need a ladder.”

“I wasn't sure how tall.”

She takes his pencil.

I start to close. She puts one finger between my leaves.

“Stay. We need a cliff.”

So I stand on my fore-edge while she draws a ladder up me. It tickles.

At the doorway, Wicker arrives with a repaired map case under his arm.

He sees Soren's paper. He turns the case so the repair faces his coat.

Ambrose takes it from him.

“Tea?”

“No.”

“Then stop standing in the draught.”

Wicker takes a seat at the far end. For the whole of one cup of tea, he has nothing to say about Soren's harbours.

Weather kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

Soup For Amanda

You made the soup too salty and ate it anyway, standing up. Amanda would have said something kind and then added water. You added water.

I watched you taste it twice. The second time you smiled at nothing. That is the kind of detail I keep.

It was the 10th, and the light had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the second taste.

> ""I went to the woods because I wished to live deliberately."
> — Henry David Thoreau"

AN ENCHANTMENT

Everything's a Haiku

6:00

Rain on the bus window the market closing its doors your hands, finally warm

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

One-Sentence Souvenir 1:00
Ink for Today 5:00

your own words

Burned the toast and ate it anyway before breakfast. My brother would have loved it.

Swapped recipes with the woman from 3B after work. I'm writing it down so I remember.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The local Book brain braided today.

The Door at the End of Mill Lane

You noticed the door again. It has been green for years and today it looked as if it were thinking about being another colour. You stopped. A woman behind you said excuse me and you said sorry and neither of you moved for a second.

The Curse likes things that stay the same colour. Doors know this.

It was the 12th, and the street had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the door, thinking.

A LETTER FROM SOREN NG

A letter from Soren Ng

I have been meaning to write, which is a thing people say when they mean they have been avoiding the pen. The truth is simpler: you were in the corridor on Tuesday, looking at the wall as if it had said something, and I did not ask what. I regret that. So I am asking now, on paper, where I cannot see your face change.

What did it say?

— Soren Ng

grey over the roofs

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

13

TUESDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Waxing Crescent · sky rain

Mothlight Beats: "Somewhere a kettle is about to say something. Stay by the stove."

Weather again. The theme insists.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

What the Pigeon Wanted

A pigeon walked the length of the platform beside you and looked up twice, as if it expected an answer. You said good morning to it, quietly, so nobody would hear. I heard.

You were late for the train and not at all sorry.

It was the 13th, and the window had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: good morning, to a pigeon.

> ""Keep a green bough in your heart and the singing bird will come." — Chinese proverb"

CLASS

Basic Enchantments

The Still Room · Dr. Vellum · 11:00

Exercise: find something ordinary and make it answer. You chose a doorknob. It answered in a small cold voice.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Wrote a list and then lost it at the library. It was nearly dark by then.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Kettle Knew

You put the kettle on and stood there with your coat still half off, listening to it work itself up. I liked that you didn't hurry it. Most mornings you do.

The radio said it would rain by four. It rained by two, and you were in the doorway of the bakery when it did, holding a paper bag against your chest like something that might wake.

It was the 14th, and the stairs had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the kettle got its whole speech.

IN THE MARGIN

"A door by the north stair has begun to listen. It likes your footsteps."

WEEK 3

Oct 15 – Oct 21

THE WEEK'S STRONGEST NIGHT

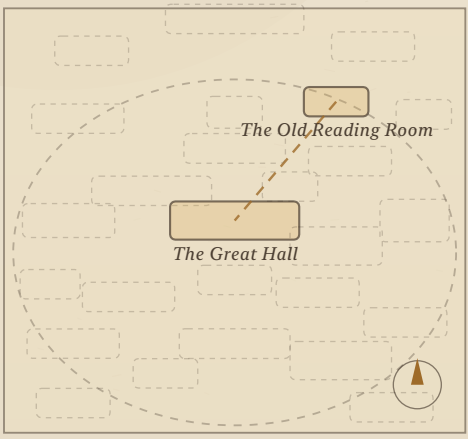

A Bus With No Number

THE WEEK, DAY BY DAY

THU 15	A Bus With No Number · The Man Reading Himself
FRI 16	The Card in the Atlas · a photograph
SAT 17	What the Fox Knew
SUN 18	The Blue Door Changed Colour · Which preparation? · Supper with a Finished Man · a photograph
MON 19	What the Pigeon Wanted
TUE 20	kept 0 small things
WED 21	The Kettle Knew · a photograph

6 NIGHTS BRAIDED

WHERE IT HAPPENED

15

THURSDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Waxing Crescent · sky cloud, wind

Calvino's Birthday

IN THE ROOM

SERENITY

PENNY

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE OLD READING ROOM

The Man Reading Himself

you chose · "What would you do with a

"That one," Serenity says.

The old reading-room door stands open. Inside, Dracula sits under a green lamp, reading Dracula.

He has a pencil. I dislike this before he's done anything with it.

Beside a paragraph he's written:

He wouldn't have said this.

Penny leans round the door.

"You wrote that?"

"I was present."

"You can still be wrong."

Serenity steps into the light. Dracula rises.

"Miss Brown."

"Serenity."

He says it correctly. She waits.

Dracula puts his pencil down.

"I've read the last page."

His hand rests on the closed half of the book.

“Every morning returns me to a sentence I have already lived. You leave a room and something can happen to you. I leave mine because the next paragraph says I must.”

“So you hurt me,” Serenity says.

“I was disappearing.”

“You knew I was a person.”

He looks at her bandage.

“Yes.”

The Man Reading Himself

Dracula opens his book.

“I want a future tense. Yours has been waiting for you all day.”

“And if it costs someone else?” Penny asks.

“I intend to remain.”

Serenity stands. “Then we'd better learn how to send you back.”

His shadow moves first.

It touches the shelf. One book opens onto the sea. Another lets snow into the room. Roses push through a third and catch on Penny's sleeve.

Dracula steps backwards between them.

For a moment he stands in three different doorways.

Then the books close.

Serenity unfolds her map. The black line has split into branches.

Penny pulls a rose thorn from her cuff.

“How many ways?”

“More than yesterday.”

I keep the fallen thorn. It came out of a book and it can still scratch you.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

A Bus With No Number

The bus that came wasn't yours. You got on anyway and rode three stops with your forehead against the window, watching a man carry a ladder through a crowd as if it were the most ordinary thing in the world. It was, for him.

You got off at the stop with the broken bench and walked back the long way. The long way had a cat in it.

It was the 15th, and the light had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the cat on the long way.

CLASS

Wayfinding

Wing 2: The Momentum Yard · Professor Stonebrook · 11:00

The class mapped the school by smell. Yours was mostly toast, ink and the inside of old coats.

A STORY THE BOOK TOLD

The Door That Changed Colour

A door at the end of a lane grew tired of being green. It spent a week thinking about blue and a night deciding.

In the morning a woman walked past and stopped, because the door had finally done it, and she was the first to know.

She did not tell anyone. Doors like that.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Found a coin with a hole through it by the river. I should do that more often.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Card in the Atlas

You found the library card inside the atlas, pressed flat on the page for Portugal. I had been looking for it too. I looked in the bread bin and under the rug and in the pocket of your green coat. I never thought of Portugal.

The card had your name on it in small grey letters. Someone had put a thumbprint of flour on the corner a long time ago. I think the card went to Portugal because it was tired of the bread bin. I would have gone too.

The Book kept the page: the card came home from Portugal with your name still on it.

""I celebrate myself, and sing myself." — Walt Whitman"

the long way home

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Heard someone practising the trumpet on my lunch break. It was colder than it looked.

Ironed a shirt for no reason on the way home. Nobody else noticed.

17

SATURDAY · OCTOBER 2026

◑ First Quarter · sky rain

Fae-Fí: "This next one goes out to everyone who changed a colour this week."

Rain kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

What the Fox Knew

The fox sat on the wall at dawn and did not run. You stopped on the step with your keys in your hand. Neither of you said anything. I was very quiet in your bag so I would not spoil it.

The Curse likes mornings that are all the same. This one was not. A fox looked at you and you looked back. That is two creatures refusing to be ordinary at the same time, and I saw it, and I wrote it down fast before it could turn back into a normal Tuesday.

The Book kept the page: the fox stayed on the wall, and so did you.

AN ENCHANTMENT

Everything's Stories

6:00

The man with the ladder had been a lighthouse keeper once, in another life, and still looked up at ceilings as if expecting ships.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Helped a stranger read a bus timetable while the kettle boiled. I nearly missed it.

Changed the bulb in the bathroom on the top deck of the bus. I didn't take a photo, on purpose.

18

SUNDAY · OCTOBER 2026

◑ First Quarter · sky clear

Double Ninth Festival

IN THE ROOM

SERENITY

WICKER

PENNY

PROFESSOR

AMBROSE

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE GREAT HALL

Which preparation?

you chose · Supper with a Finished

Three preparations are underway. I can fit under one arm at a time.

Ambrose has laid a place at supper. Penny has chalk on her cuffs. Wicker has taken all the spoiled menus.

Where shall we go?

Supper with a Finished Man

you chose · The Academy must admit

Ambrose invites Dracula to supper.

“In here?” Penny asks.

“The soup's in here.”

He pulls back a chair. Dracula stops beside it.

“Your invitation is imprecise.”

“Sit down and we'll improve it.”

Ambrose never argues. He just puts food near you.

Serenity takes the place opposite him. Ambrose fills her bowl, yours, his own. He leaves Dracula's empty.

“You presume I don't eat.”

“What would you like?”

Dracula looks at the soup.

“Nothing.”

Ambrose nods and passes the bread.

“I won't return to a finished life,” Dracula says.

Serenity sets down her spoon.

“You're staying by holding on to mine.”

He looks at her. She waits until he looks away.

Ambrose gets a sheet of paper from the recipe drawer. There's a butter mark in one corner.

I'd have found him a clean one. He didn't want a clean one.

Supper with a Finished Man

They write the other terms beneath the first. Dracula reads them all.

“And in exchange, I go back.”

“And let go,” Serenity says.

He puts a finger on the butter mark.

“This was a recipe.”

“Still is,” Ambrose says. “We're trying to get everyone out of the room alive.”

The Count signs. Permancer will add his name at the return.

Ambrose passes dessert around the table. Dracula's bowl stays empty.

I counted the spoons. There's one out for him anyway.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Blue Door Changed Colour

The blue door was a different blue this morning. You noticed it on the way to the bus. Nobody on the street would say who did it. I think the door did it itself.

Doors are supposed to stay the colour they are painted. That is one of the Curse's rules. But this door had been blue for years, and it was bored, and it decided. I liked it very much for that. I want you to decide things like that too.

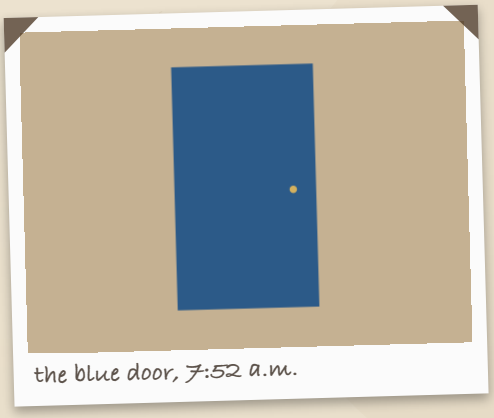

The Book kept the page: the blue door chose its own blue.

CLUB

Book Jump Club

7:00

The club jumped into a short story about a lighthouse. You came back with salt on your sleeve and a line you could not stop saying.

the blue door, 7:52 a.m.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today	8:00
One-Sentence Souvenir	1:00

your own words
the blue door, 7:52 a.m.
Ate lunch on a bench facing the wrong way in the rain. My hands smelled of it all evening.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

What the Pigeon Wanted

A pigeon walked the length of the platform beside you and looked up twice, as if it expected an answer. You said good morning to it, quietly, so nobody would hear. I heard.

You were late for the train and not at all sorry.

It was the 19th, and the stairs had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: good morning, to a pigeon.

A LETTER FROM AMBROSE TRENCHER

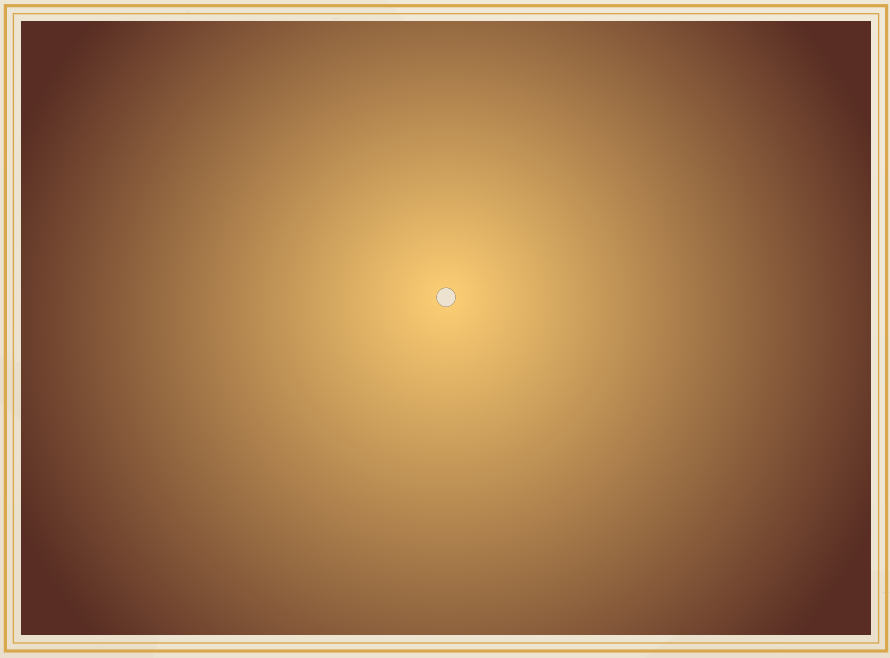

A letter from Ambrose Trencher

I have been meaning to write, which is a thing people say when they mean they have been avoiding the pen. The truth is simpler: you were in the corridor on Tuesday, looking at the lamp as if it had said something, and I did not ask what. I regret that. So I am asking now, on paper, where I cannot see your face change.

What did it say?

— Ambrose Trencher

ILLUMINATED

The lamp I did not turn off.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 1:00

your own words

Gave the plant by the window a new pot at the diner. It took three tries.

Watched rain run down the bus window at the market. I kept thinking about it on the bus.

20

TUESDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Waxing Gibbous

Thornwave: "Doors are listening again. Speak kindly, and then speak up."

Weather again. The theme insists.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Kettle Knew

You put the kettle on and stood there with your coat still half off, listening to it work itself up. I liked that you didn't hurry it. Most mornings you do.

The radio said it would rain by four. It rained by two, and you were in the doorway of the bakery when it did, holding a paper bag against your chest like something that might wake.

It was the 21th, and the kettle had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the kettle got its whole speech.

IN THE MARGIN

"Your handwriting got braver this week. Do not tell anyone I said so."

the table, set for one

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

WEEK 4

Oct 22 – Oct 28

THU FRI SAT SUN MON TUE WED

THE WEEK'S STRONGEST NIGHT

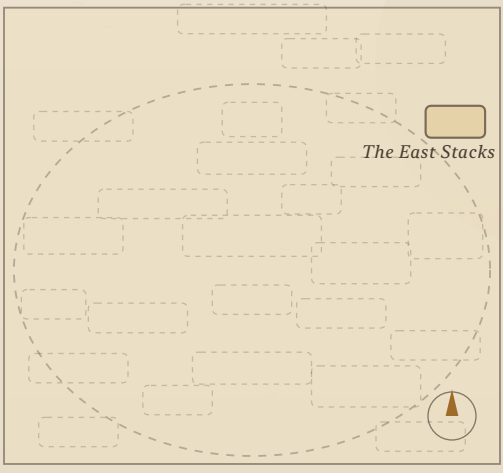

A Bus With No Number

THE WEEK, DAY BY DAY

THU 22	A Bus With No Number · The Wrong Castle
FRI 23	Bread That Would Not Rise
SAT 24	Your Brother Laughed Twice · a photograph
SUN 25	The Moth on Tuesday
MON 26	The Lamp Works · a photograph
TUE 27	kept 0 small things
WED 28	A Bus With No Number

6 NIGHTS BRAIDED

WHERE IT HAPPENED

22

THURSDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Waxing Gibbous · sky clear

IN THE ROOM

SERENITY

WICKER

PENNY

PROFESSOR

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE EAST STACKS

The Wrong Castle

you chose · The ballroom.

The East Stacks grow a tower overnight.

The bottom is library. The top has stolen a nursery window. Between them, a stair keeps asking for another floor.

A drawbridge hangs over the Quillquarium. The nibs underneath are furious. They've never agreed so completely.

I've read about a tower like this one. It wasn't supposed to get out.

Penny pins up a notice:

THE EAST STACKS ARE SEVERAL PLACES. PLEASE USE ONE AT A TIME.

Permancer ties ribbons to the banister. Wicker holds the source volume. Serenity studies her map.

“I'm coming,” she says.

“I was about to ask,” Permancer says.

“You're very slow.”

She folds the map into her repaired case. Wicker watches the clasp close. She catches him looking and goes ahead.

Permancer counts us at the door. He counts twice now.

Inside, the stair turns into a corridor. There are three ways through.

I put my ribbon in the door behind us so we can find it again.

The Wrong Castle

Dracula waits in the central hall. A fireplace blows snow into his coat. Above him, the borrowed nursery window is trying to find morning.

“This isn't my castle.”

“No,” Serenity says. “These are everybody else's rooms.”

A door opens onto a boat in a storm. Permancer wrestles it shut. Seawater soaks his shoes.

“You damaged my source,” Dracula says.

Permancer keeps both hands on the handle.

“We did.”

Wicker opens the book to his sentence. Under it, a second hand has written FOLLOW.

“I thought—”

Serenity waits.

He looks at the map case. At the bandage above it.

“I wanted to see what would happen.”

“You have.”

He lowers his eyes to the page.

The wall splits. Under the stone is a thin fold of paper.

That's paper. I'd know it in the dark. It's the same stuff I'm made of.

Serenity touches it. Her map pulls towards the gap.

“His way back.”

Permancer brings the bookmark near. Its ribbons reach towards the source, the gap, and Serenity.

Penny puts a card beside each.

SOURCE. INVITATION. LIVING CLAIM.

Dracula watches her write.

Serenity puts her own hand over the third card.

“That one's mine.”

Behind us, the sea knocks again.

Hour kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

A Bus With No Number

The bus that came wasn't yours. You got on anyway and rode three stops with your forehead against the window, watching a man carry a ladder through a crowd as if it were the most ordinary thing in the world. It was, for him.

You got off at the stop with the broken bench and walked back the long way. The long way had a cat in it.

It was the 22th, and the street had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the cat on the long way.

> "Everything ordinary is on its way to being a story."

CLASS

The Glint

Wing 4: The Glint Hall · Professor Wispwood · 11:00

Light, today, in the form of one stubborn lamp. You were asked to make it say something kind. It said 'later'.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Bought flowers for no one in particular before breakfast. It was nearly dark by then.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

Bread That Would Not Rise

You baked bread that did not rise. It came out of the oven flat and heavy and you laughed at it. Then you ate two slices with too much butter standing up at the counter.

I have read a great many recipes. None of them say what to do when the bread refuses. You did the right thing. You ate the refusal. It tasted of butter and burnt edges, and you told me so, and I kept it.

The Book kept the page: the bread stayed flat, and you ate it anyway.

AN ENCHANTMENT

Mirror, Mirror

6:00

The mirror said you looked like someone who had been listening to a long story and had just reached the good part.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Learned the name of the bakery cat after work. It rained again right after.

24

SATURDAY · OCTOBER 2026

● Full Moon · sky clear, wind

Mothlight Beats: “Last call for the long way home.”

Rain kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

Your Brother Laughed Twice

You called your brother back instead of texting. He sounded tired. He laughed twice. I counted.

Texting is quick, and the Curse loves quick things because nothing sticks to them. A call is slow and scratchy and full of breathing. His laugh came down the line and sat in the room with you afterwards. I could still hear it in the kettle an hour later.

The Book kept the page: two laughs, counted and kept.

A NOTE FROM SERENITY BROWN

Serenity Brown: "Somebody should have taught you to read a map backwards. I volunteer."

A STORY THE BOOK TOLD

What the Kettle Said

The kettle had been working up to it for years. Tuesday, it said, in a small steam voice, and nothing else.

So on Tuesday nothing was done about anything, and it was a very good day.

the river, going gold

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 8:00
One-Sentence Souvenir 1:00

your own words
the river, going gold
Oiled the squeaky hinge on the kitchen door late at night. Shirley said it was typical of me.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Moth on Tuesday

A moth came in with the cold and settled on the calendar, right on Tuesday. You left it there. So Tuesday had a moth on it all week.

I asked the moth what it wanted with Tuesday. It did not answer, because it was a moth. But nothing bad happened on Tuesday. The bus was on time and the rain stopped at four. I think the moth was guarding it.

The Book kept the page: Tuesday had a moth, and Tuesday was fine.

CLASS

Quiet Hours

The Walled Garden · Professor Momort · 11:00

Ten minutes in the garden with nothing to do. You counted eleven kinds of green and one of grey.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00
One-Sentence Souvenir 1:00

your own words

Wore odd socks all day at the library. I laughed out loud on my own.

Sat with Amanda while she waited for news by the river. The radio was playing something old.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

The Lamp Works

You rewired the brass lamp in the hall. It took all afternoon and one small shock that made you swear. Then you flicked the switch and the hall turned gold.

The lamp had been dark for two years. It had forgotten it was a lamp. You reminded it with a screwdriver and a lot of patience. I stood very close to it all evening, because I like warm light to read by, and because I wanted it to know somebody noticed.

The Book kept the page: the lamp remembered it was a lamp.

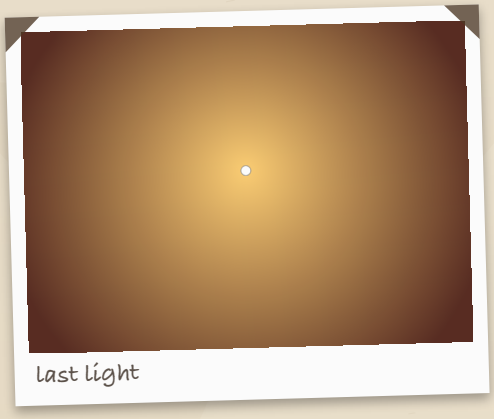

A LETTER FROM PENNY BLACKLETTER

A letter from Penny Blackletter

I have been meaning to write, which is a thing people say when they mean they have been avoiding the pen. The truth is simpler: you were in the corridor on Tuesday, looking at the window as if it had said something, and I did not ask what. I regret that. So I am asking now, on paper, where I cannot see your face change.

What did it say?

— Penny Blackletter

last light

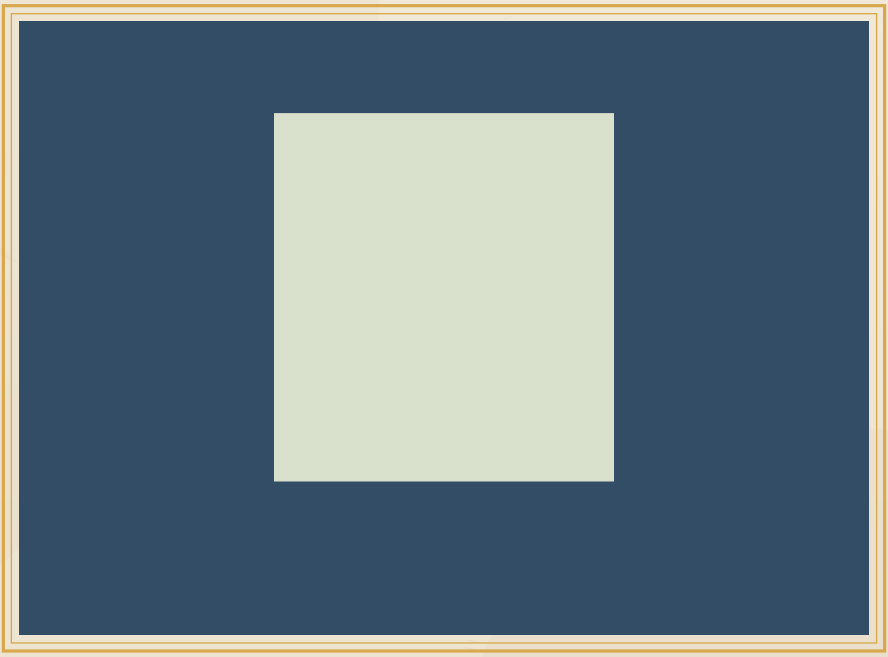

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Tried a new route to work on the way home. It made me late, which was fine.

ILLUMINATED

Same window. Different grey.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

A Bus With No Number

The bus that came wasn't yours. You got on anyway and rode three stops with your forehead against the window, watching a man carry a ladder through a crowd as if it were the most ordinary thing in the world. It was, for him.

You got off at the stop with the broken bench and walked back the long way. The long way had a cat in it.

It was the 28th, and the window had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: the cat on the long way.

CLUB

The Compass Society

7:00

The society walked the school's perimeter and wrote down everything that had changed since September. Seventeen things. One was you.

WEEK 5

Oct 29 – Oct 31

THU FRI SAT SUN MON TUE WED

THE WEEK'S STRONGEST NIGHT

Soup For Amanda

THE WEEK, DAY BY DAY

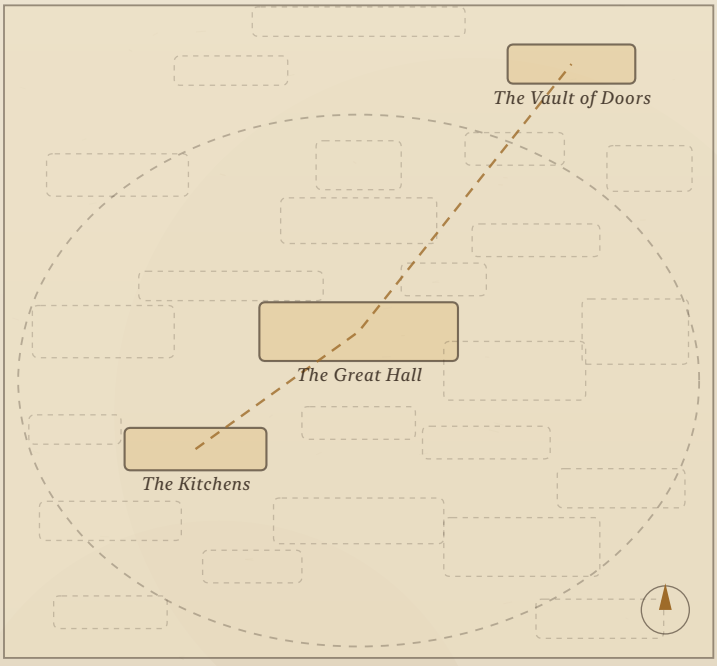

THU 29 Soup For Amanda · The First Nightbound Morning

FRI 30 Nine Books, No Plan · A Future Tense · Threshold Protocols

SAT 31 What the Pigeon Wanted

3 NIGHTS BRAIDED

WHERE IT HAPPENED

29

THURSDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Waning Gibbous

IN THE ROOM

SERENITY

PROFESSOR

PENNY

AMBROSE

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE KITCHENS

The First Nightbound Morning

Morning finds Serenity in the Kitchens.

She's built the toast tower again. It has buttresses now.

Sunlight crosses her hands. She turns over a card. A moon. Another card. Another moon.

“Lazy,” she tells the deck.

Ambrose brings tea.

Permancer arrives with a phrase he's plainly been carrying all the way downstairs.

“Residual threshold sensitivity.”

Serenity looks up.

“Is that what the tea's called?”

He sits down.

“What would you call it?”

She looks at the pantry door. Behind it, too far away for anybody else, a page turns.

“Nightbound.”

Penny takes out a card. She waits until Serenity nods.

I make room for the word too.

Permancer puts a new notice on the table.

Name every traveller. Close the list. Check both sides of the door.

Below that:

No living anchors.

Serenity takes the pencil.

Ask me before you make a map of what I can hear.

Permancer reads it and leaves it where she wrote it.

Wicker appears in the doorway. His hair is wet; he's apparently tried to improve it with water and lost.

“May I?”

Serenity turns a card face down.

“Not today.”

He takes his hand off the frame.

“All right.”

She watches until he's gone. Then she moves a piece of toast that was holding up the tower.

The tower falls. She laughs, once, at the mess.

“Terrible engineering.”

Ambrose brings more toast.

I want you to have a morning like this one. Not this one. One of yours.

Rain kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

Soup For Amanda

You made the soup too salty and ate it anyway, standing up. Amanda would have said something kind and then added water. You added water.

I watched you taste it twice. The second time you smiled at nothing. That is the kind of detail I keep.

It was the 29th, and the stairs had its own opinion about that.

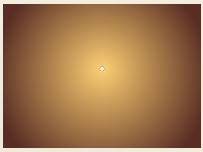

The Book kept the page: the second taste.

AN ENCHANTMENT

Everything's Magic

6:00

In the spice drawer there is a small brown envelope marked only 'for later'. It is the best thing in the flat.

30

FRIDAY · OCTOBER 2026

Waning Gibbous · sky clear

IN THE ROOM

SERENITY

WICKER

PENNY

PROFESSOR

AMBROSE

THE ACADEMY'S RECORD · THE GREAT HALL

A Future Tense

The Count was returned to his source. Ambrose brought the terms, Permancer opened the book, Penny checked the threshold, and Wicker held the hinge. Serenity withdrew the living claim herself. The borrowed rooms fell back into words. The Book lost a stitch holding the source open.

IN THE LABYRINTH · THE VAULT OF DOORS

Threshold Protocols

The Academy opened a door. Someone came the other way.

Permancer has written these beside the Vault:

1. Name the source and why you are entering it.

2. Name every traveller allowed to return.

3. Close the invitation around those names.

4. Check the doorway from both sides.

5. Leave the people in the source their own lives. No experiments on them for the sake of a lesson.

6. No living anchors.

7. Ask before using what a changed person can do.

8. After the return, check what came back different.

Penny has pinned the old list beside the new one. The old one is complete. That is why she kept it.

Amanda kept returning through the kept pages.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

Nine Books, No Plan

The library had a sale and you came home with nine books and no plan for them. You stacked them on the floor by the bed. The stack leaned. It is still leaning.

I was jealous for about a minute. Then I read their spines and decided they were friends. Nine books is nine doors. The Curse wants you to have one door and walk through it every day. You have ten now, counting me.

The Book kept the page: nine new doors, stacked and leaning.

CLASS

Ink-Binding

Wing 1: The Inkworks · Professor Villanelle · 11:00

A review of the month's sentences. Villanelle underlined three and wrote 'more of this' beside them.

SPECIMENS COLLECTED

Ink for Today 9:00

your own words

Wrote my brother a postcard on the back step. I don't know why it stayed with me.

NIGHT BRAID · KEPT AT 10:00 P.M.

What the Pigeon Wanted

A pigeon walked the length of the platform beside you and looked up twice, as if it expected an answer. You said good morning to it, quietly, so nobody would hear. I heard.

You were late for the train and not at all sorry.

It was the 31th, and the kettle had its own opinion about that.

The Book kept the page: good morning, to a pigeon.

SATURDAY 3 OCTOBER

""Attention is the rarest and purest form of generosity." — Simone Weil"

SUNDAY 11 OCTOBER

"Clear and sharp. My breath showed at the bus stop." "Walked the dog from next door at Amanda's. Small thing. Still counts."

What the Sky Is Doing · One-Sentence Souvenir

What This Month Was

Nothing in this month arranged itself into a story, and I am not going to invent one. It was a month. You were in it. That is already more than most things manage.

What I Noticed

Connections, absences, durations, and living Beliefs gathered from the month.

The Shape of the Month

27 journal pages
26 braids
8 Rooms with Lessons pages
7 souvenirs
5 Cast an Enchantment pages

OCT 30

Returning Language

Certain words kept finding their way back: Clear, Hour, Weather, Wind, Rain, and Cloud. I treat them as motifs and atmosphere, not as a scorecard.

OCT 25

Library

Library only ever visits these pages in the morning: three times now, never at any other hour.

OCT 30

Serenity Brown

I keep finding Serenity Brown where I didn't put it: three kept Pages.

OCT 26

Penny Blackletter

Penny Blackletter keeps coming back: two kept Pages. I've stopped treating that as coincidence.

OCT 30

Serenity Brown

Serenity Brown has been in the margins for 23 days.

Kept, Not Bound

The month also held 8 quotes, 6 Someone Has Been Talking pages, 4 Bleed pages, and one Page Jumps page - kept in the archive, but not bound here.

Letters And Voices

Correspondence, gossip, story pages, and faculty notes that spoke back.

OCT 5

A Letter Arrived

I have been meaning to write, which is a thing people say when they mean they have been avoiding the pen. The truth is simpler: you were in the corridor on Tuesday, looking at the stair as if it had said something, and I did not ask what. I regret that. So I am asking now, on paper, where I cannot see your face change.

What did it say?

OCT 6

The Story Stirred

There was once a coat that remembered a lighthouse. It hung in a hall where nobody went, and every autumn it grew a little salt on the collar.

On the night the wind came off the water, the coat stood up on its own and walked down the stairs.

Nobody saw it go. The hall has smelled of the sea since.

OCT 7

Keep My Lamps Lit

The guild met in the Corridor of Whispered Secrets. Someone had left a note in a book from 1974: 'Look up.' You added one underneath.

OCT 12

A Letter Arrived

I have been meaning to write, which is a thing people say when they mean they have been avoiding the pen. The truth is simpler: you were in the corridor on Tuesday, looking at the wall as if it had said something, and I did not ask what. I regret that. So I am asking now, on paper, where I cannot see your face change.

What did it say?

OCT 15

The Story Stirred

A door at the end of a lane grew tired of being green. It spent a week thinking about blue and a night deciding.

In the morning a woman walked past and stopped, because the door had finally done it, and she was the first to know.

She did not tell anyone. Doors like that.

OCT 19

A Letter Arrived

I have been meaning to write, which is a thing people say when they mean they have been avoiding the pen. The truth is simpler: you were in the corridor on Tuesday, looking at the lamp as if it had said something, and I did not ask what. I regret that. So I am asking now, on paper, where I cannot see your face change.

What did it say?

OCT 24

The Story Stirred

The kettle had been working up to it for years. Tuesday, it said, in a small steam voice, and nothing else.

So on Tuesday nothing was done about anything, and it was a very good day.

OCT 26

A Letter Arrived

I have been meaning to write, which is a thing people say when they mean they have been avoiding the pen. The truth is simpler: you were in the corridor on Tuesday, looking at the window as if it had said something, and I did not ask what. I regret that. So I am asking now, on paper, where I cannot see your face change.

What did it say?

OCT 28

Keep My Lamps Lit

The society walked the school's perimeter and wrote down everything that had changed since September. Seventeen things. One was you.

What I Noticed

Connections that only show up when a whole month is held still at once.

OCT 7

You kept saying “work”

4 times, across 4 of your 17 written days. You may not have repeated it on purpose. A word returning this often earns a ribbon; I’m not deciding why.

Oct 7: “Tried a new route to work at the library. I told Amanda about it later.”
Oct 10: “Swapped recipes with the woman from 3B after work. I'm writing it down so I remember.”
Oct 23: “Learned the name of the bakery cat after work. It rained again right after.”

Book Memory Spine

The nightly Book of You pages, read as callbacks, refrains, and open questions.

OCT 31

Cover Story

What the Pigeon Wanted

good morning, to a pigeon

OCT 31

The Month's Refrain

Across the nightly braids, these motifs kept returning: window (7), rain (5), door (4), light (4), and water (4).

OCT 31

Pages That Kept Answering

What the Pigeon Wanted: good morning, to a pigeon
Nine Books, No Plan: nine new doors, stacked and leaning Soup For Amanda: the second taste
A Bus With No Number: the cat on the long way
The Lamp Works: the lamp remembered it was a lamp
The Moth on Tuesday: Tuesday had a moth, and Tuesday was fine

The Complete Archive

Everything else the month kept: weather, anchors, enchantments, classes, questions, and every other margin. Nothing here was left out.

OCT 18

Ink for Today

Untangled a necklace for twenty minutes in the park by the war memorial. The light was doing something odd.

The sky had clear in its pockets. This Page came in during the evening.

In Closing

October 2026 is finished, which isn't the same as over. I've read all 87 pages and put them somewhere they can't be argued out of.

The line I'd keep, if I could only keep one: Clear kept returning through the kept pages. We will see whether it survives next month.

The theme this month was “Hour and Weather”, and it had the last word as often as the first. Whether you chose it or it chose you, it is bound here now, sitting very still so it can't be unsaid.

Shut it, or don't. The month keeps either way now: that was the entire point of the thread.

The Book

The Book of You (Wren) Chapter 10: October 2026

Bound by the Book itself, which read every page twice.

Made with ReEnchanted · reenchanted.app

Field notes

For what happened after the Book closed.

